2015
AJCU-CITM & Libraries Conference
Supporting Jesuit Education - Changing the World One Student at a Time

Welcome AJCU Colleagues!

Loyola University Maryland and the Loyola Notre Dame Library are proud to host the 30th annual AJCU-CITM conference. This year we are joining technology and library leadership into one gathering in order to share ideas and collaborate.

Your 2015 conference team has planned a valuable and engaging conference, which will also introduce you to the best that Baltimore has to offer. You'll quickly learn why Baltimore is known as "Charm City," as well as enjoy our beautiful Evergreen campus.

Our theme for the 30th anniversary of this conference is "Supporting Jesuit education – changing the world one student at a time." With tracks for libraries, CIOs, CITM, PPM, and TTL all supporting this theme, there is a place for everyone to explore how we can help Jesuit education go forth and set the world on fire.

During your visit, if there is anything we can assist you with, please don't hesitate to speak with one of our conference volunteers – look for the "Ask Me!" stickers they will be wearing.

Thank you for joining us!

Keynote Speakers

Lorcan Dempsey

Vice President, OCLC Research and Chief Strategist

Lorcan coordinates strategic planning and oversees Research, Membership and Community Relations at OCLC, Online Computer Library Center. OCLC is a non-profit membership computer library service and research organization dedicated to the public purpose of furthering access to the world's information and reducing library costs. More than 14,000 libraries in 170 countries have used OCLC services. Lorcan has worked for library and educational organizations in Ireland, the UK and the US. His influence on national policy and library directions is widely recognized.

In 2010 he received the National Federation of Advanced Information Services' (NFAIS) highest award, The Miles Conrad Award. He is an honorary Doctor of the University of the Open University in the UK and has twice received an ALCTS Presidential Citation for his work with OCLC colleagues. Lorcan began his career in public libraries in his native Dublin, Ireland. Before moving to OCLC, he managed the UK higher education national investment in information services for JISC. He is a member of the Cambridge University Library Visiting Committee.

H. David Lambert

President and CEO, Internet2

David Lambert has more than 30 years of distinguished experience in the advanced research and education networking and information technology fields. Mr. Lambert has held a variety of leadership positions at Georgetown University, Cornell University, and Indiana University and has served on numerous higher education technology associations and advisory boards. He became president and chief executive officer of Internet2 on July 7, 2010.

President Lambert works with the Internet2 Board of Trustees and the Executive Leadership Team to further establish Internet2 as the partner of choice for the U.S. and international research and education community; seeking to enhance research collaboration, network services and infrastructure throughout the world.

Under his leadership, Internet2 is building on the organization's membership foundations to establish a unique set of unified capabilities that empower innovation for U.S. and global research and education institutions by leveraging the organization's core principles of innovation, transformation, and community.

Mr. Lambert also guides Internet2 and its members to engage global research and education network leaders, to build broader consensus on strategic programs and services in areas critical to Internet2 members and partners.

His ability to bring the research and education community and industry together has yielded extraordinary results in a very short period of time.
