Definitions

- Supply Chain Excellence is defined both by improving year-over-year performance versus a peer group and by outperforming the industry on a collection of key metrics including but not limited to service level, safety, sustainability, and organizational development.
- Sustainability is the achievement of top-line growth and bottom-line results for the long term; the responsibility to use methods; system and materials that won't deplete or harm natural cycles, and an obligation to uphold the social contract with the society in which they operate.
- Innovation is the application of creating new or improving current solutions that meet new requirements, unarticulated needs, or existing market needs through more effective products, processes, or technologies.
- Leadership - This award recognizes an individual who has demonstrated the values-based leadership espoused by our founder, St. Ignatius of Loyola: responsible leadership with a consistent focus on personal integrity, ethical behavior, and a balance between justice and fairness. Ignatius of Loyola and his followers trained leaders who “understood their strengths, their weaknesses and their values, and had a vision of the world; embraced change and adapted themselves to a changing world; treated others with love and with a positive attitude; and strengthened themselves by providing them with heroic ambitions” (Chris Lowney)
