Workers inspect tomatoes at a Foxconn plant in China. The company, a major supplier of Apple and iPhones for Apple, has come under increased scrutiny over the way it treats workers across a range of other threats to workers' rights, including new reports of suicides in 2015.

How do the concerns at Apple supplier Foxconn compare with the history of U.S. industrialization?

By Kristin Samuelson | Tribune reporter

Michael Zimmer

Loyola University Chicago

Laura Finch Hartman

Dartmouth University

Eric Gellman

Assumption University

---

Facts: China and workers rights

Working conditions at one of Apple Inc.'s largest suppliers have come under intense scrutiny. At least 1,000 employees at China-based Foxconn Technology Group, which manufactures the iPad and iPhone,传说中的"富士康"集团，通过加班和低工资等手段，迫使员工长时间工作。数以百万计的工人在组装电子产品，承受着严苛的工作条件、安全威胁和低报酬。

But this year, some of the 10 million employees work at Foxconn threatened to quit, and thousands more participated in protests to demand better working conditions and pay.

The labor association's independent facilities are first-class, the living and working conditions are very good, above average of the area.

Keeping in mind that the Apple labor issues in China are quite severe for foreign companies, especially concerned about foreign companies working in China.

What is the argument about labor in China?

The argument about labor in China is quite significant. In recent years, there has been an excellent example of China's labor movement. However, some people have pointed out that China's labor movement has not yet reached its full potential. This is because China's labor movement has been dominated by the government, and the people who make those decisions do not necessarily support the workers. It is not that the government does not appreciate the workers, but they may not necessarily have the same interests as the workers. The government may prioritize the economy over individual rights or welfare of the workers.

How can we improve the labor movement in China?

To improve the labor movement in China, it is crucial to build stronger labor unions and provide better support and resources for them. This can help ensure that workers have a voice in decisions that affect their working conditions and pay. Furthermore, there needs to be a stronger legal framework that protects workers' rights and provides remedies for labor violations.

---

What do we know about labor in China?

How can we improve the labor movement in China?

To improve the labor movement in China, it is crucial to build stronger labor unions and provide better support and resources for them. This can help ensure that workers have a voice in decisions that affect their working conditions and pay. Furthermore, there needs to be a stronger legal framework that protects workers' rights and provides remedies for labor violations.

---

How can we improve the labor movement in China?

To improve the labor movement in China, it is crucial to build stronger labor unions and provide better support and resources for them. This can help ensure that workers have a voice in decisions that affect their working conditions and pay. Furthermore, there needs to be a stronger legal framework that protects workers' rights and provides remedies for labor violations.

---

What do we know about labor in China?

How can we improve the labor movement in China?

To improve the labor movement in China, it is crucial to build stronger labor unions and provide better support and resources for them. This can help ensure that workers have a voice in decisions that affect their working conditions and pay. Furthermore, there needs to be a stronger legal framework that protects workers' rights and provides remedies for labor violations.