A Loyola University Chicago student from northwest suburban Buffalo Grove was found dead inside a campus residence hall Thursday. Police said there is no indication of foul play.

“We are extremely saddened to let you know that one of our students, Joseph Suh, passed away today, April 5,” Loyola’s Vice President of Student Development Robert Kelly said in an email to students, which was later posted to the website of the campus student newspaper, the Loyola Phoenix.

Suh, 18, from the 500 block of Cobblestone Lane in Buffalo Grove, was pronounced dead at the scene at 6340 N. Winthrop Ave., according to the Cook County Medical Examiner’s office.

He was discovered about 4:25 p.m., and it did not appear any sort of foul play was involved, police said.

Regis Hall, a Loyola residence hall housing first-year students, is located at that address, according to the university’s website.

“We would like everyone to please keep your thoughts and prayers for the family,” Kelly said in the email, which said support services are available for students dealing with the loss.

An autopsy to determine the cause and manner of his death is scheduled for later Friday.

Area North detectives are investigating.
